ABOUT ME

My name is Jamil Wehbe. I am based in Siegen, Germany, and I work with software and web development.

I started out with an apprenticeship in media design focused on web development, where I gained my first practical experience in a web environment. I am currently training as an IT assistant (Informationstechnischer Assistent).

I am particularly interested in clean software development, web technologies, databases and the technical reasoning behind them. It matters to me not just to use frameworks, but to understand how they work.

I want to develop my skills further through real projects, an internship and day-to-day professional work.
